UPPER MIDWEST ENDURANCE AND COMPETITIVE RIDES ASSOCIATION

Letter from the Prez....

Greetings!

Congratulations on the completion of another ride season. Please check the results and points carefully, so the awards committee can begin and complete their work soon. If you see discrepancies please report them to points keeper Robin Schadt - robinschadt@aol.com.

Several board members report that there has been no feedback or questions received about the pending bylaw changes. I urge you to read about them NOW and get your questions and concerns addressed NOW by a board member or rider representative. Here is the link to the bylaws that will be voted on in January: <http://www.umecra.com/BylawsAndRules/ProposedBylawChangesFor2017Meeting.pdf>

These proposed bylaw changes were presented at the January 2016 annual meeting and in newsletters throughout the spring and summer. You have had plenty of time to get clarification. If you are just reading them now - that's okay. Get your concerns addressed now by a board member. Because of the amount of information we are going to have to move through at the January 2017 annual meeting, discussion will be limited. Please read up and be prepared to vote on these important items.

There are also a number of proposed rule changes that will be voted on in January. See them in the March minutes, they start on page 3: <http://www.umecra.com/MeetingMinutes/2016BODMeetings/BODMeetingMinutesMarch19-2016.pdf>

Rides get one voting delegate per day of their ride at annual convention. Typically the ride managers for the ride are the voting delegates. Riders do have a say, so please contact your rider reps and voice your concerns. There are also rides that need alternate voting delegates or "proxies" - these folks are typically riders who vote with a ride manager when the ride manager can't fill their delegate spot. Delegates and alternate voting delegates and rider representatives and the vet representative debate and vote on resolutions during the meeting. If you want to be an alternate voting delegate at the convention in January in Rochester, please ask around. There are always some ride managers who can not attend convention and perhaps you can be one of the alternate delegate for a ride.

Lastly, thanks so much for riding, volunteering, vetting and putting on rides this year. We appreciate your dedication.

UMECRA President

14 Up-to-Date Equine Parasite Control Facts

No doubt about it, parasite control in horses has changed dramatically during the past decade. Gone are the days of rotational deworming scheduled at regular intervals throughout the year. Now, scientists are studying parasite resistance to common anthelmintic (deworming) drugs, and veterinarians are offering clients more targeted equine parasite control solutions.

1. No “one-size-fits all” program for all horses exists when it comes to internal parasite control. Each horse has a unique parasite load, and each herd/farm requires a targeted parasite control plan.
2. Equine internal parasites are evolving resistance to the drugs designed to combat them. Resistance is a genetic adaptation that worms pass to succeeding generations; once they develop resistance to a particular drug, those worm populations are not likely to revert back to susceptibility.
3. A parasite control program should begin with a fecal egg count (FEC) test. Your veterinarian evaluates FEC test results before and after deworming to help determine a baseline for parasite levels and efficacy of the treatment.
4. Fecal egg counts are useful for classifying horses as low, moderate, and high egg shedders. They’re reliable for identifying ascarid eggs and determining anthelmintic efficacy. However, they don’t provide information on overall horse health or indicate the horse’s disease risk.
5. Researchers at the University of Kentucky are developing a cell-phone-based application to perform fecal egg counts (FECs).
6. Do not deworm horses at fixed interval frequencies year-round. Different types and life stages of parasites flourish at different times of the year, and there are parasite seasons and off-seasons with huge differences in parasite transmission.
7. A French study found more dominant horses had lower internal parasite burdens. One theory is that lower-ranking horses get less-choice feed or grazing areas and therefore are more likely to be exposed to hay or grass contaminated with feces.
8. The American Association of Equine Practitioners released its updated parasite control guidelines in 2013 and updated them in 2016. The goals are to minimize the risk of parasitic disease in horses; control parasite egg shedding; maintain effective drug control; and avoid further development of anthelmintic (drugs used to treat infections with parasitic worms) resistance as much as possible.
9. Smart management techniques can keep pasture parasite loads down. This can include manure removal, rotational grazing, and cross-species grazing.
10. Overgrazing a pasture can lead higher parasite populations, putting horses at greater risk. Signs of overgrazing include roughs (areas of tall grass where horses defecate) and lawns (areas of shorter grass where they prefer to graze).
11. Large roundworms, Parascaris spp (commonly known as “ascarids”) live in the small intestine and can cause severe colic in foals and weanlings. This parasite has become widely resistant to ivermectin and moxidectin worldwide.
12. A Canadian study looking at feral horse herds found that older horses have lower parasite loads than younger ones.
13. A University of Kentucky study determined that ultrasonography is an effective approach for detecting ascarids in foals’ abdomens. Ultrasound results were consistent with worm counts. Researchers suggest that veterinarians could perform abdominal ultrasounds looking for parasite burden in combination with lung ultrasounds routinely used to identify Rhodococcus equi infection in young horses.
14. Researchers are looking at inflammatory response in healthy adult horses after treatment with dewormers and are finding little to no systemic inflammatory response.
